

Department of Philosophy Colloquium

Clayton Littlejohn

from

Australian Catholic University will present a talk entitled

“What is sufficient evidence?”

Abstract: The evidentialists believe that we should never believe anything without sufficient evidence and that we may always believe what we have sufficient evidence to believe. They have said surprisingly little about how we should understand sufficiency. After reviewing some of their suggestions, I shall offer an account of sufficiency and discuss some of the surprising implications that this account has for understanding the connections between evidence, rationality, and knowledge.

Wednesday, September 25, 2024

at 4:00 pm

Room #6191 in H.C. White Hall